

IAL at Tec

- First-rate infrastructure, unique in Mexico
- Focus on sustainable food production
- Focus on international standards
- State-of-the-art technologies
- Synergy with traditional degrees
- Modernization of agricultural science
- National and international accreditations

Strategic partners

- Alpura
- Kerry
- Sigma
- Bunge
- Femsa
- Nutrigrains
- Food Bank
- PepsiCo
- US Dairy Export Council
- Seven Eleven
 - Mars
- Unilever
- Nestlé

Study abroad

- University of British Columbia
 - Texas A&M
 - Purdue
- University of California-Berkeley
- University of California-Davis
 - Cornell

Food industry today

- The food industry represents 23% of the manufacturing industry's GDP and 3.69% of the national GDP.
- Food is a factor that contributes to the prevention of the growing number of chronic and degenerative diseases.
- The global food consumption trend is leaning towards an individual diet, which will revolutionize the industry.
- Mexico is the USA's second largest processed food supplier and the third largest processed food producer in America.

Specialize

- Intelligent Bioproduction Systems
- Bio-business
- Aquaculture Systems

Your future

- Leading and managing agri-food companies
- Consulting for food production and export companies
- Management of agricultural development centers
- Advising the development of advanced production projects
- Starting your own technology-based sustainable business
- Research centers
- Production systems service, input and technology companies
- Financial sector
- Public administration

Did you know that... the IAL degree program has three accreditations: one national (CACEI) and two international (IFT and ABET), and is also the first in Latin America to achieve IFT accreditation?